Abstract: Ensuring competitiveness and creating a competitive environment should be regulated and protected by legislation at the state level. Because a society with a legal protection and all economic subjects follow the same laws can be developed on the basis of democratic principles. Because the creation of a competitive environment in countries transitioning to a market economy requires a rather difficult and complicated path.

Key words: competition law , competition policy , monopoly the law

For the purpose of promotion, ensuring competition and putting an end to monopolies through state regulation of the economy, practical work aimed at creating and maintaining fairness in unhealthy markets undoubtedly requires the development and improvement of the law in this regard . Competition policy reflects the position of the national economy and determines the investment flow of governments and their organizations on issues of competition and cooperation. Therefore, in the development of competition and anti-monopoly legislation, it is necessary to follow developed countries and international norms.

In different countries, anti-monopoly regulation is different and this approach is explained by the features that depend on the country's chosen path of development, beliefs and economic opportunities. The main problem for the economy of developed countries is monopolies, not competition. Therefore, In the international experience, considerations are about fighting monopoly.

In the transition to a market economy in any country, interrelated processes such as privatization, anti-monopoly fight and development of competition have their own place. After all, the competitive environment, which is one of the main factors of development, exists in the conditions where various forms of ownership are created through privatization and anti-monopoly measures are properly implemented.

Article 9 of the Law of the Republic of Uzbekistan "On Competition" states that " The State Committee for Assistance to Privatized Enterprises and Development of Competition of the Republic of Uzbekistan and its territorial bodies are competent bodies in the field of ¹competition in commodity and financial markets ." reefed. Therefore, this committee directly ensures the competitiveness of the subjects of the economic sphere, but also exercises control over monopolies and unfair competition. remains a big obstacle for sustainable development. That's why the development strategy of New Uzbekistan for 2022-2026, signed by President Sh.M. Mirziyoev, states " Reducing state participation in the economy and opening a wide path for the private sector" due to cancellation of exclusive rights and privatization of state-owned companies
